Summary Thoughts

Revenue guidance of $78B was above nearly every investor bogey we heard pre-call and demand commentary was as bullish as we have probably ever heard from the company with backlog now building into C2027. Additionally, inventory purchase commitments nearly doubled Q/Q (coming off >60% growth last Q) - which by our analysis adds enough headroom for quarterly revenue to reach the ~$100B/Q range over the next few Qs. Despite all of this goodness, the stock was still only flattish in the aftermarket - maybe due in part to the new inclusion of stock comp in non-GAAP EPS which means that we are actually trimming C2026E EPS. At the end of the day, it is hard to see how the stock continues to languish - especially as Y/Y growth (which has actually been highly correlated with NVDA shares - see Figure 1) starts to re-accelerate in C2H:26E and growth at investor favorites like memory/optical/semicaps starts to decelerate. Net, we walk C2027E/2028E EPS up a bit more to ~$12.7/~$14.8 but maintain our $245 PT and Buy rating.

Analysis/Key Highlights

- NVDA reported FQ4 revenue of ~$68B, above both UBSe and Street and slightly ahead of its usual ~$2B/Q beat. Data center of $62.3B beat expectations, with Compute $2B light and Networking ~$2.5B ahead. Gaming was largely in-line but $300MM below Street, while ProViz was ~$550MM ahead of UBSe/Street.
- FQ1 Revenue was guided to $78B at the midpoint, above our expectations of $76B and ahead of most buyside expectations we heard heading into the print. Gross margin of 75% was largely in-line and consistent with previous commentary of holding gross margin in the mid-70s. Opex guidance of $7.5B ($5.6B core + $1.9B stock comp) was slightly below our expectations for $5.7B of core opex in FQ1.
- For full year F27/C26, NVDA noted revenue will be up sequentially every quarter; gross margins should sustain in the mid-70s; opex up low 40s % Y/Y, and ETR should be 17-19%.
- NVDA estimated Grace Blackwell NVL72 systems accounting for 2/3rd of Data Center revenues in JanQ with the remaining 1/3 largely in form of HGX Blackwell deployments that leverage different system components (like CPUs). We estimate Blackwell + Blackwell Ultra accounting for 94% of the GPU unit shipments. Compared to NVDA's Oct-25 estimate of 10MM GPUs order backlog for C2025-C2026 we think the number has now moved closer to 12-13MM which we think makes sense given that NVDA had 3-4 months to add to order backlog since the last estimate. We now expect ~$440B in GPU revenues for the period, which compares to $500MM that NVDA estimated including both GPUs and Networking.

- One of the most important indicators we watch is the growth in NVDA's "supply" - which we consider to be the sum of 1) balance sheet inventory , 2) gross inventory purchase commitments, and 3) long-term supply obligations. NVDA excludes cloud related commitments from its total reported purchase commitments to provide a clean inventory-related number. Last Quarter BS inventory + inventory purchase commitments grew a whopping ~$25B Q/Q (56% Q/Q) and this accelerated again this quarter, up $46B sequentially or 66% Q/Q. The ratio between this number and next Q revenue has been growing in recent Qs as the "supply" covers a more extended period because NVDA is procuring items like memory over a longer timeline. Adjusting for these recent changes, this suggests supply is sufficient for quarterly revenue in the $100B range within a couple of Qs. This is all shown in Figure 2 and Figure 3. Management noted on the call that this is to support the buildout beyond the next several quarters, while the 10-K notes substantially all of this amount is in support of F27 revenue.
- Networking revenues grew 34% Q/Q and 260%+ Y/Y, coming in ahead of our expectations as NVLink scale-up solution is now ramping (compared to minimal volumes a year ago). In addition to scale up, NVDA highlighted customer interest in Ethernet and Infiniband. We see networking growing slightly ahead of Compute in the near-term.
- With respect to China, the quarter included only minimal (~$20MM) revenue shipments and, similar to FQ3, the company is not baking in any H200 revenue into AprQ guidance. Importantly, the 10-K notes that in Feb-2026, the USG granted NVDA licenses for H200 shipments into China, but the company is yet to find out whether it will be allowed to ship into China. The company confirmed that the 25% rebate system by the USG is now in place.
- Sovereign revenue tripled in FY26 to over $30B, driven by Canada, France, Netherlands, and Singapore. Looking ahead, management expects sovereign to grow at least in-line with the AI infrastructure market.
- Customer concentration increased in FY2026, with the top two direct customers representing 36% of the total revenue (~$77.7B; 22% attributed to a first customer and 14% to a second) compared to FY2025, when the top three direct customers accounted for 34% of revenue.
- Opex was up $900MM Q/Q in FQ4 to $5.1B but was guided up just $500MM Q/Q on a core basis in FQ1 to $5.6B ex stock comp ($100MM better than UBSe). However, NVDA is also changing its reporting in FQ1 to no longer adding back stock comp $1.9B to reported non-GAAP opex; we believe this may lead other semi cos to consider changing their reporting as well. Regardless, on a core basis the company continues to expand operating margins with revenue guided up 14% Q/Q at the midpoint and opex up 10%. Cloud service commitments were up $1B Q/Q to $27B after a much bigger increase in FQ3.
- Free cash flow came in at ~$35B or an extraordinary ~50% FCF margin. Share repurchases were only ~$4B and share repurchases in the opening weeks of FQ1 have been $1.5B. Now that NVDA seems to be "over the hump" with many of its purchase commitments and given our estimate of ~$190B in FCF generation this year, it seems almost inconceivable that the company would not significantly increase its share buyback activity.

Read Across

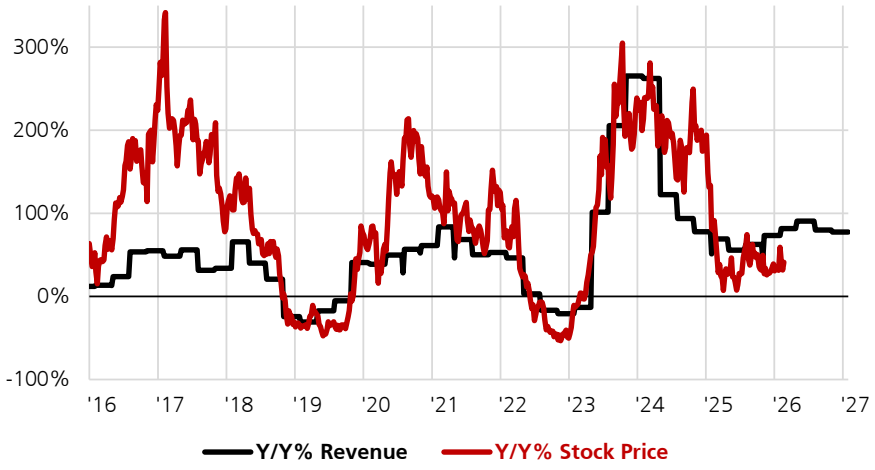

We see the decision to include SBC (which is now down to only ~2% of NVDA revenue) in non-GAAP guidance as a negative for AMD and particularly MRVL. We believe this may increase the pressure on those management teams to report similarly - and SBC is a much larger portion of revenue for those companies (and they are both already quite a bit more expensive than NVDA).

Valuation: PT $245 (unchanged)

Our PT remains at $245, based on a 19x P/E multiple applied to C2027E EPS of $12.68 (previously a 20x P/E and C2027E EPS $12.08).

* "GPUs " include adjustment for superchips. For example, GB200/300 and VR200 all have 2 GPUs and 1 CPU and counted as 2 GPUs each in our GPU count. VR300 is expected to have 4 GPUs. "Vera CPUs" number includes both Vera CPUs in superchips and stand alone. "Units (chip, superchip)" count total units sold, representing multi-GPU superchips as 1 unit
 GPU/CPUs CoWoS number assumes NVDA's "Other" CoWoS requirement at 20%.

Company Description

NVIDIA Corp. designs and manufactures graphics processing units, add-in boards, and related low-level software. Its Graphics Processing Unit segment includes GeForce for high-end video games and professional graphics workstations; Quadro for designers; DGX and Tesla Accelerator cards for data center and AI scientists; and GRID for cloud-based visual computing users. The Tegra Processors segment provides processors that enable embedded computer vision applications in automotive video surveillance end markets, as well as delivering multimedia experiences on mobile gaming platforms, while consuming minimal power.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

NVDA: Our price target is based on applying a P/E multiple. NVIDIA company-specific risks include: 1) competition from AMD in graphics processors (GPUs) and professional visualization products, which historically have driven the bulk of the company's gross profit, 2) intense competition in ARM-based applications processors, where rivals seek to leapfrog NVIDIA's early lead in dual-core technology, 3) emerging competition from Intel with its many-integrated core (MIC) processor family vs. the company's professional GPU computing products, where Intel's approach could be more flexible and easier to develop software. In addition, NVIDIA faces the semiconductor sector risk where revenue trends have historically been linked to corporate profitability, which could be challenged for robust growth, as the economic recovery has been more subdued vs. prior deep downturns.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
