Summary

Results were very strong and guidance spot in-line w/our preview, but most importantly, NVDA is finally providing firmer guidance on C2027 that implies EPS >$16 even as gross margins face near-term headwinds from memory price inflation. We like the choice to explicitly guide next year (as opposed to its prior backlog commentary) and we think demand still far exceeds this number so there is still room to walk this higher if supply and powered data center shell capacity allow. To make the point about demand, we think NVDA is tracking to ship ~13GW this year (~7GW to hyperscalers and ~6GW to neoclouds) and NVDA's new C2027 guidance (including ASP increases) implies ~19-20GW. However, the emergence of SPCX (which UBS estimates is implying ~6GW added in C2027 (see here)) would seem to put NVDA in a heavy allocation situation and leave little to no room for shipments to hyperscalers to grow at all. More broadly, the story is rapidly evolving here as NVDA extends its platform to the factory level, provides financing support to neoclouds and frontier model builders to vertically integrate, and heavily embraces open models with the Poolside and now Hugging Face deals - which should ultimately expand its TAM far beyond hardware. At the end of the day, NVDA has historically been surprisingly well correlated with Y/Y revenue growth (see Figure 1) and it appears likely to have peaked in FQ2, but it also looks like there is a path to ~$22-23 EPS in C2028 meaning the stock is trading at only ~10x EPS in the aftermarket - too cheap for the growth that is still in front of the company and residual value that exists from upgrading the entire GPU installed base globally (which has yet to even begin). Net, we walk C2027E/2028E EPS up from $16.20/$19.81 to $17.16/$22.08, increase our PT to $300, and maintain Buy.

Analysis/Key Highlights

- Results: NVDA reported FQ2 revenue of $96.2B, above both UBSe and Street by ~$2.5B/$4B and notably ahead of its usual ~$2B/Q beat. By segment, Data Center beat by ~3% - led by Compute ahead and Networking largely in-line with our expectations - while Edge Computing was 6% ahead of our expectations.
- Guidance and gross margin: NVDA guided revenue to $108B - spot in-line w/ our preview, though gross margin was guided down slightly Q/Q to 74%, with further declines expected and a near-term bottom at 71-72% in FQ4. After this, the company is implying gross margin will come back to the 72-73% range - in part we think as it is being more aggressive on pricing to offset some of the near-term memory headwinds. On one hand, we are encouraged to see this taken off the table as a point of near-term concern and at some point it should get relief on memory prices (we think only starting in C2H:28), but competition is intensifying and AMD's MI500 Series roadmap looks like it may close the gap somewhat, so it remains to be seen whether longer-term margins can push back to the mid-70%s.

In terms of revenue, the company did not provide FQ4 soft guidance but did indicate that Rubin is ramping even faster than Blackwell and that the Blackwell "tail" will fall off faster than prior generations. Using our supply chain work, we see revenue >$130B in FQ4.

- Outlook for FY28: Looking ahead, management expects FY28 revenue to increase 70% Y/Y - implying something at least in the $695B range based on Street numbers into this call. That said, the FY28 guidance is gated by supply constraints, with potential upside as unconstrained demand is significantly higher than supply. This would imply GW shipments in the ~20GW range versus ~13GW this year but demand seems like it could be considerably higher given the emergence of SPCX, which is implying (we think) that it will add ~6GW next year. With the revenues growing 70% Y/Y, we think NVDA's OpEx will likely grow ~40-50% Y/Y.
- Commitments: We define NVDA's supply as the sum of (1) balance sheet inventory and (2) gross inventory purchase commitments plus long-term supply obligations. Importantly, NVDA excludes cloud-related commitments from its reported purchase commitments, providing a cleaner view of inventory-related supply. On this basis, supply rose sharply to $311B in FQ2 from $145B in FQ1 (+115% Q/Q). While commitments covering FY2027 declined slightly to $92B from $95B last quarter, virtually all of the growth was driven by FY2028 and beyond, where supply commitments increased from ~$119B to ~$279B. Total future commitments now stand at $366B, with the majority tied to memory procurement and expected to be settled within the next three years. Management reiterated that supply is likely to remain a bottleneck through at least FY2028, making these commitments critical to supporting the Vera Rubin ramp.
- Financing deals: The company provided some more color around several of the recent deals, most specifically the PORTS-Pike deal with Softbank Energy in which it is providing credit support on land, power, and shell for an initial 4.25GW, with an option to take the remaining 3.75GW and OpenAI as the tenant for the 8GW installation. SB Energy will own and operate the site under a 20yr lease with OpenAI. In other financing arrangements with neoclouds, these deals will have a component of revenue sharing in which NVDA will split the economics if and when the data center is able to lease compute at prices above its cost guarantees. When queried, the company suggested that the revenue sharing component of these deals would ultimately reach the $Bs of revenue but would not be as large as NVDA's CPU revenue (for example). Ergo, the revenue sharing component of these deals should be a fairly small portion of total revenue. Some of the numbers provided for the site suggested a GPU ASP in the $100k range - considerably higher than what we are currently using in our bottom-up model - but when queried, the company suggested this is accounting for higher ASPs for future generations and higher revenue per GW with each successive product generation.
- Customers: NVDA has begun to disclose data center revenue in two buckets: hyperscalers and ACIE (essentially neoclouds and enterprise). This Q, it reclassified a customer from ACIE into hyperscaler (we think SPCX) and we can see from - Figure 4- that SPCX has done ~$13B in revenue for NVDA over the past 6mos - e.g. a trajectory of ~1GW/yr. This is a number that should increase dramatically. As for the split, hyperscalers are still running at ~55% of the mix, but NVDA intends to grow the ACIE mix as we think it is prioritizing support for these customers amid expanding demand (hyperscalers are even running excess workload through the neoclouds to expand capacity). This also works well for NVDA since many of the hyperscalers are all working on their own silicon roadmaps so there is an increasingly clear "line in the sand" being drawn.
- Customer Concentration: Consistent with NVDA comments about broadening customer base, FQ2 customer concentration decreased Q/Q and Y/Y, with NVDA highlighting only one direct customer representing 16% of total revenue (or $15.4B). This compares to 54% of revenue split between three direct customers in FQ1:27 and 39% of revenue between two direct customers in FQ2:26.
- Updating Our Unit Estimates: We are updating our unit estimates as we now expect higher ASPs for Rubin and a relatively shorter Blackwell shipment "tail" in C2027. We model ~8.4MM GPUs in C2027 (up from 8.1MM in C2026 even despite higher TDP and ASP of Rubin vs Blackwell). We now expect CPU revs of ~$20B in C2026, likely doubling in C2027 to $40B (of ~4-5MM units) and LPX contributing ~$32B in revenues in C2027 with ~1.6MM units shipping, although we have yet to pick up more supply chain data points on the near-term scale of LPX supply.

- LPX: On the point of LPX, NVDA highlighted strong early traction for Groq 3 Alpek, its first rack-scale LPU system, which is now in full production and demonstrating nearly 4x higher tokens/sec versus the next-best alternative on NVDA's internal AI analysis benchmark. NVDA expects to begin volume shipments later this quarter to early adopters. That said, management positioned LPUs as a specialized solution optimized for ultra-low-latency, highly interactive inference workloads where speed is prioritized over throughput and cost per token - expanding NVDA's addressable market and strengthening its inference portfolio, but unlikely to become a material revenue driver relative to the core GPU business in the near term.

We view bullish commentary on the C2027 demand as positive for AI compute and networking stocks, and particularly the names in our coverage more levered to NVDA supply chain, like MRVL, SMTC, and ARM, as well as memory vendors, like MU.

*"GPUs" include adjustment for superchips. For example, GB200/300 and VR200/300 all have 2 GPUs and 1 CPU and counted as 2 GPUs each in our GPU count. "Vera CPUs" number includes both Vera CPUs in superchips and stand alone. "Units (chip, superchip)" count total units sold, representing multi-GPU superchips as 1 unit.

Company Description

NVIDIA Corp. designs and manufactures graphics processing units, add-in boards, and related low-level software. Its Graphics Processing Unit segment includes GeForce for high-end video games and professional graphics workstations; Quadro for designers; DGX and Tesla Accelerator cards for data center and AI scientists; and GRID for cloud-based visual computing users. The Tegra Processors segment provides processors that enable embedded computer vision applications in automotive video surveillance end markets, as well as delivering multimedia experiences on mobile gaming platforms, while consuming minimal power.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

NVDA: Our price target is based on applying a P/E multiple. NVIDIA company-specific risks include: 1) competition from AMD in graphics processors (GPUs) and professional visualization products, which historically have driven the bulk of the company's gross profit, 2) intense competition in ARM-based applications processors, where rivals seek to leapfrog NVIDIA's early lead in dual-core technology, 3) emerging competition from Intel with its many-integrated core (MIC) processor family vs. the company's professional GPU computing products, where Intel's approach could be more flexible and easier to develop software. In addition, NVIDIA faces the semiconductor sector risk where revenue trends have historically been linked to corporate profitability, which could be challenged for robust growth, as the economic recovery has been more subdued vs. prior deep downturns.

This document is a general communication and is educational in nature; it is not an advertisement nor is it a solicitation or an offer to buy or sell any financial instruments or to participate in any particular trading strategy. Nothing in this document constitutes a representation that any investment strategy or recommendation is suitable or appropriate to an investor's individual circumstances or otherwise constitutes a personal recommendation. By providing this document, none of UBS or its representatives has any responsibility or authority to provide or have provided investment advice in a fiduciary capacity or otherwise. Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or sustainable investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
